MY LEARNING STYLE

WHICH ONE IS MOST LIKE YOU?

VISUAL LEARNERS

Visual learners relate most effectively to written information, notes, diagrams and pictures. Typically they will be unhappy with a presentation where they are unable to take detailed notes. To an extent, information does not exist for visual learner unless it has been seen written down. This is why some visual learners will take notes even when they have printed course notes on the desk in front of them. Visual learners will tend to be most effective in written communication, symbol manipulation, etc.

Visual learners should look at all study materials. They should use charts, maps, filmstrips, notes and flashcards. Visual learners should practice visualizing or picturing words or concepts in their heads. Visual learners should write of everything for frequent and quick visual review.

Visual learners make up around 65% of the population.

AUDITORY LEARNERS

Auditory learners relate most effectively to the spoken word. They will tend to listen to a lecture. and then take notes afterwards, or rely on printed notes. Often information written down will have little meaning until it has been heard –it may help auditory learners to read written information out loud. Auditory learners may be sophisticated speakers, and may specialize effectively in subjects like law or politics.

Auditory learners may want to use tapes. Taped lectures may help fill in the gaps in the students notes. Auditory learners should sit in front of the classroom where they can hear well. Auditory learners should do reading assignments out loud or recite summaries of written materials.

Auditory learners make up about 30% of the population.

TACTILE LEARNERS

Tactile learners learn effectively through touch, movement, and space, and learn skills by imitation and practice. Tactile learners often work slowly because information is normally not presented in a style that suits their learning methods.

Tactile learners should trace words as they are saying them. Facts that must be learned should be written several times. Tactile learners should keep a supply of scratch paper for this purpose. Tactile learners may also benefit from typing notes and/or acting out (role playing) different situations. For example. tactile learners might pretend they are different parts of the cell and actually move about the classroom when studying cell structure.

Tactile learners make up about 5% of the population.

DIRECTIONS

To gain a better understanding of yourself as a learner, you need to evaluate the way you prefer to learn or process information. By doing so, you will be able to develop strategies which will enhance your learning potential. The following evaluation is a short quick way of assessing your learning style.

This 24 item survey is not timed. Answer each question as honestly as you can.

Place a check on the appropriate line after each statement.
